Most of the content on this site is created by our users, who are members of the public. The line which was to lead to the realisation of this ambitious scheme was Wartime on the Railways carried, however, more than a comparatively short distance, and other proposals 1 for bringing the trade and traffic of the Belgian Congo under the Wartime on the Railways of Germany, by securing it either for the German East Africa Railway or for new German lines connecting the Congo with the chief port of the Cameroon; 2 for a coastal railway connection between German South-West Africa and Portuguese Angola helping to ensure the ultimate possession thereof for Germany ; and 3 for the extension of the Lobito Bay railway to the southern districts of the Belgian Congo as part of a German line of rail communication from the west coast across Central Africa to the east, had all failed of realisation at the time that war broke out; though here we get still further evidence as to the nature of the aims that Germany was cherishing. Bomb damage had to be repaired quickly and portable machinery used for moving
