Single unions were created, such as the Soviet Unions of Composers, of Artists, of Cinematographers, of Theater Workers, of Writers, and so on, in order to ensure that all artists would express themselves in a way that was understood by the masses and needless to say that was ideologically correct. Dvenadtsatyi etazh distinguished itself by a lively, natural atmosphere, where satellite links were set up to remote areas of the Soviet Union, to interview young people in their own environment rather than in a hostile studio.
