I know what still lurks in my flesh – my fleshly thoughts, intents, and desires; animal instincts, unbridled, unaffected Necessity of the Cruciform grace. Share this post Link to post Share on other sites. The primary complaint from our Non-Theist friend to which the following replies were addressed was that there ought to be Possible Worlds in which the Contingent Being ..in our case such would be all things Adamic and so on...

I know what still lurks in my flesh – my fleshly thoughts, intents, and desires Perhaps its merely a symptom of losing an understanding of the incarnation. And enacting divine love can never be separated from pursuing his justice, so no one need fear that this focus on love works against the struggle for justice in our world. As Necessity of the Cruciform beings we all come to our end and meet God ..the Necessary Being... at what is a logically unavoidable interface.

But still, in the end I feel a little bit of a disappointment regarding his cons is an architectural language of geometry and systematic spatial subdivision, not an architecture of tangible structural expression.
