Paolino 18 – Rather it is more like what Fiske, in Television Culture, calls a "producerly" text. The waiting that is life: There is one more reason because of which people might not want to leave arrested lives - it is because they are waiting for something to happen, some sort of sign from life, some sort of chance to prove themselves or something and they keep on waiting even though it becomes clear there is no point - like people who wait for a bus longer than they should - always deciding to wait a little longer when limit they had previously set is reached, because they have got invested by waiting that long and, also, because they will look like fools for wasting all this time if they chose to walk away now ... Lattesa e la speranza (Campi del sapere) (Italian Edition), they keep telling themselves that bus will be here anytime
